"After years of serious use involving training combined with conducting product evaluations as a freelance writer involving the industry's leading publications, I have no hesitation stating that Wolf Ammunition is the standard for steel cased ammunition in terms of reliability and performance in a multitude of chamberings; not just limited to Soviet/Russian chamberings but also including .223, .308 and 9mm. Wolf's product line is more complete than most think with offerings in rimfire, reloadable brass cases, primers, and shotshells. Wolf Gold products are an excellent example of this with match grade rifle loads and personal defense handgun offerings."

Whether it's doves or taking out steel "knock-downs", I love WOLF primers. I've been through thousands of small magnum pistol primers and 209 shotshell primers, and I'm completely satisfied. They have excellent sensitivity, and are hot enough to light off my "light" cowboy loads with no misfires. They feed perfectly in my progressive reloader, and are a great value in this inflationary component market. I highly endorse WOLF primers; it is the only primer I'm using and recommend.

"Training with arms is a serious business that requires dedication in effort and time. A good portion of that time needs to be spent on the range. There is no getting around the monetary investment that goes along with it.

Find out what ammunition your arms will feed reliably and then shop for the best price. More often than not this is where Wolf Ammo comes into play. Over the last two decades I have fired literally tens of thousands of rounds of Wolf Ammunition through pistols and carbines. During training I run AKs smoking hot and have never been disappointed by the ammunition." PaulMarkel.com
